

Backyard Wild

November 2011

Darwin houses, backyards and parks are host to an ongoing cycle of growth, decay and fusion, a place where wildlife thrives as a continuum of nature.

Talitha Kennedy

Basil Hall

Siying Zhou

Anna Reynolds

Winsome Jobling

Merran Sierakowski

Anna Reynolds, Old Stella Maris Darwin, Ink jet print, 2011, 81 x 61 cm

Talitha Kennedy, Palm Sprouts, leather, thread and lead, 2011, approx. 20cm height, dimensions variable

Basil Hall, Sand Palm 1, 2 and 3, Multi-block woodblock (hand printed) on awaki, 76 x56 cm

Siying Zhou, Look for Clove Oil, cotton stitches on photographic paper, digital print, 2011, 29 x 39 cm

Gamba Grass and Candle Bush

Candle bush

Cabomba

Salvinia

Water hyacinth

Clitoria – Centro

Winsome Jobling, handmade watermarked paper, white abaca, pigmented cotton with cut work, hand drawn pulp painted 'vine' edging

Merran Sierakowski, Extreme Gardening, fly wire, galvanised wire and electrical wire, 2011